Anticipate Heavy Rains in S. C.

Flood control engineers said today they have been given to understand that the coming rainy season may be expected to bring heavier-than-normal precipitation and are making plans accordingly.

In contrast to a statement attributed to Dr. Irving Krick in a Los Angeles newspaper predicting that this winter would not bring as much rain as last year, flood control engineers said they also consulted with Dr. Krick and reviewed his weather charts. The conclusions they reached with Dr. Krick were almost in contrast with those published by the Los Angeles newspaper, they said.

Jury Says Hagberg Must Pay Dog Tax

gated two witnesses and established the fact that Hagberg had refused, after several requests, to pay the required dog tax. The witnesses were Doyle Davidson, humane officer for three years, and Charles Hendrix, dog license collector.

Claims Ordinance Unfair Davidson testified that Hagberg told him that he would not pay the tax and if the matter was ever brought before Judge Lessing's court he (Hagberg) would see that Lessing was ousted. The Walterian did not offer to deny this assertion. He claimed that dogs were a necessity in Walteria "to warn off prowlers," and reported that in San Francisco and Fresno no licenses are charged dog-owners if they keep their pets confined at home.

He read a brief article by Albert Payson Terhune, famed dog fancier and writer, to the effect that dogs were the only animals around homes or farms on whom owners must pay a direct tax. He asserted the city ordinance was unfair to any person who, like himself, keeps his dog confined on the homeplace.

The jury was composed of Neil Webb, Mrs. Leona Scudder, Mrs. Nellie Eckersley, Alexander Ferguson, Monroe Internill, Mrs. Roma Robinson, Mrs. F. M. Carr, Mrs. Margaret Guttenfelder, Mrs. Maude Welch, Mrs. Mildred Evans Charles Chaplin and Mrs. Pauline Grubb.

Streets Need Re-Surfacing, Council Told

and put a new angle on the suggestion for street improvement.

Extra Tax Revenue "Our increased assessed valuation ($21,256,070 as compared to $19,776,955 in 1937 or a gain of $1,479,085) has brought more tax revenue to the city than had been anticipated when your 1938-39 budget and tax rate was adopted. According to figures I have seen, this means the city has about $18,000 more to spend at no increase in the tax rate this year.

"I believe—and so do many other interested citizens — that this money should be allocated for street improvement, particularly Gramercy, Sartori, El Prado, Post and Cravens avenues. Next year the city could work on other streets until, in a few years, all of them would be resurfaced and restored," Deininger suggested. "Unless this is done, it will take a bond issue to finance a general street reconstruction program to build up avenues which have been neglected. And bond issues aren't popular right now. Our streets have good bases, all they need is re-surfacing with some 'hot-mix' pavement and they will not go to ruin."

Disario Tours Europe Gripped in War Scare

at New York, Disario sailed to Naples and at Castronuovo, in the central part of Italy, he visited with his parents. He had not seen his mother for 30 years or his father for 27 years. They are living on a small farm, well off the beaten track of travelers and beyond the "setting" of metropolitan well-being rigged by Il Duce to impress visitors to his shores. Taxes are staggering, Disario discovered, and only recently have the rural areas received electricity.

Swiss Under Tension Italy, during the war crisis, was practically undisturbed. Disario heard Mussolini in several speeches and also saw him reviewing a military demonstration. From his parents' home he went to Rome, Venice and Milan. Because of the consulars could not guarantee him full protection as an American citizen — Italy has no naturalization treaty with the U. S. and Disario is a naturalized citizen — he curtailed his Italian stay and went to Lucerne, Switzerland.

"The Swiss were more concerned over the possibility of war than the Italians or the French because it had been reported that Hitler would march thru their nation, like the Kaiser did with Belgium in 1914, to carry out his demand for more territory," Disario said. "There were soldiers everywhere and travelers were given rigid inspections on the borders."

Cherishes Citizenship From Lucerne, Disario went to Paris and while the French were mobilizing, there was no appreciable tension. He arrived (Sept. 30) the night before Paris lifted the 10-day "lock-out" in preparation for air-raids. He intended to go to London but was advised that the British capital was in a fever of war activity, digging trenches in Hyde Park, installing anti-aircraft guns and issuing gas masks so he decided to forego crossing the Channel. The metallurgist thoroughly enjoyed his experiences of seeing Europe in the grip of its most serious war scare since 1914 but he was delighted to see the Statue of Liberty and appreciate what that monument really means for U. S. citizens. Always a patriot, Disario cherishes his American citizenship more than ever now.
